Is 42:1-4, 6-7 – "Here is my servant whom I will uphold"
Acts 10:34-38 – "In truth, I see God shows no partiality"
Lk 3:15-16, 21-22 – "He will baptize you with fire and the Holy Spirit"

Alas, as they would say, "Farewells are but sweet sorrows." Today, we celebrate "officially" the conclusion of the Christmas Season. For some of us, we've already bid it farewell. I guess some, like myself, who work up and including Dec. 25th, still hold on because with the duties of the season we're not permitted to celebrate like many others. However, when all the duties are done, and we're ready to celebrate, everyone else is on to the next holiday (St. Valentine's Day – not my favorite).

As I remarked the other day, this is the first in years that the church really defined the perimeters of the Christmas Season. It seemed every bishop or priest did his own calculation. I always taught that Christmas was from Dec. 24th (vigil) to the Baptism of the Lord. Therefore, the sanctuary should be in festive mode during that time.

Today, this marks the end, and with it another 'Theophany'. The first theophany was the revelation to the shepherds on Christmas Day. Last week the second theophany to the Magi. Now the third theophany, to the leaders and spiritual heads of the Jewish faith, the Messiah has come. Luke takes us to the figure of St. John the Baptist. The very Advent saint we met in our Advent preparation. From the desert, now to the Jordan, he is baptizing. And as he describes it, "I am Baptizing with water, but one is coming that will do so with fire and the Holy Ghost." There is a slight difference from the other gospels, in that, it was after His baptism and with His prayer does the Holy Spirit come upon Him and with that, the Father's voice is heard, "You are my begotten Son, of which I am well pleased." From this event, the Spirit leads Him into the desert. He is tempted, and emerges to begin His public ministry (3 years).

The same spirit which led Jesus from the desert to begin His quest for souls is the same one which abides in us from the moment of our baptism. And like, Jesus tries to lead us in a greater relationship with God, as well as bringing the light of life, love and faith to others.

In this Holy Year of Mercy which Pope Francis has called for, may we be re-directed this New Year. May our faith grow and actually be looked upon as a great gift. As Mary treasured the memories of Christ in her heart, may we treasure the truth of His presence in ours. And in this world of 'non believers', may our efforts bring this world back in the light. Finally, may we hear, "this is my begotten, whom I am greatly pleased". ~Fr. Joe

January is Stress Management Month

The holidays are over and everyone has to get back to work. There is no surprise that the New Year leads to a variety of different stress levels. Stress is bad for your overall well-being, including your cholesterol, but small changes to your everyday routine can help reduce stress. From aromatherapy to chewing gum, to walking, here are several speedy tension-relievers.

Aromatherapy – Is stress getting to you? If yes, it is time to stop and smell the roses. They contain linalool, a chemical that helps reduce stress. So, do herbs, such as lavender and basil, and fruit, such as oranges, grapes and mangoes. That is another good excuse to keep a bouquet of flowers, dried lavender or a bowl of fruit nearby. They smell lovely and can benefit your cholesterol.
Chew Gum, Fight Stress – Chewing gum is a great stress-buster and a little treat that will not hurt your cholesterol. According to a large study, workers who chew gum report less stress than their gum-free colleagues. This is because chomping on a stick of gum stimulates the vagus nerve, which helps induce relaxation. Just make sure your gum is sugar-free.

Tea for Stress – The British have the right idea when they brew a pot of tea during stressful times. It turns out that black tea is rich in stress-busting antioxidants, including polyphenols, flavonoids and amino acids. There is also some evidence that green tea can help lower harmful LDL cholesterol. Have a cup!

Laugh Away Stress – When it comes to stress, laughter really is a good medicine. A good belly laugh triggers production of endorphins, the brain's feel-good neurotransmitters. It also relaxes your blood vessels and increases blood flow – the ideal antidote to tension.
